Invesco Global Real Estate

Strategy Profile

A gateway to global direct property investment

The Invesco Global Real Estate Strategy provides investors access to direct investment in 247 institutional-quality properties in major cities all around the world.

By investing in Invesco’s flagship direct core real estate funds in North America, Europe and Asia, the Invesco Global Real Estate Strategy seeks to provide capital appreciation and stable income from quality tenants.

The case for Global Real Estate

Diversification	Global direct core real estate is an asset class with defensive characteristics that has historically delivered portfolio diversification from equities and bonds, and also from listed real estate and Australia-only direct real estate.
Inflation protection	A proven inflation hedge with the ability to adjust income through regular lease renewals, demonstrated by historical performance in inflationary periods.
Stable returns	Global direct core real estate has demonstrated a reliable low-volatility return profile across multiple cycles, and demonstrates the draw down protection inherent in high-quality private assets.

Invesco Real Estate (IRE) is uniquely positioned as the only manager in the world with well-established direct core real estate sibling funds in the US, Europe and Asia.

The Invesco Global Real Estate Strategy brings these funds together with an allocation to listed real estate securities to enhance liquidity and investor appeal.

Research capabilities

Research is core to our investment process and a key input at the top down macro level, influencing decisions on country, market and sector positioning, but also informing our bottom up analysis on specific assets. IRE's research covers the major real estate investment markets in Europe, the US and Asia Pacific. Globally, IRE employs a team of dedicated research professionals located in key markets around the world who perform macroeconomic, demographic analysis and city/sector level real estate market research. The Research team develops and maintains the quantitative models.

Multi-faceted ESG integration

IRE has a robust process for the assessment of environmental and sustainability issues beginning at the asset selection stage of 'strategies and execution' as shown above, for both direct properties and securities.

The following ESG considerations are taken into account when identifying and managing sustainable properties:

Environmental

Measuring and regularly reporting buildings' energy, emissions, water and waste levels

Evaluating and implementing low-cost measures, capital improvements and new technologies to improve asset performance and advance the built environment

Using rating schemes to evaluate buildings' energy efficiency

Evaluating the feasibility of pursuing third-party certification through schemes such as BREEAM, LEED and Energy Star

Taking a managed approach to the procurement of energy in deregulated energy markets

Social

Providing tools and resources to engage property managers on sustainability issues

Encouraging sustainable practices by tenants through engagement tools relevant to each property type

Providing services and amenities (e.g. gyms, bicycle storage areas and green spaces) at properties to encourage tenants and occupants to lead healthier lifestyles

Providing employee training on ESG issues

Engaging with communities on sustainability-related issues

Supporting diversity and inclusion

Governance

Leading the real estate industry in the implementation of ESG practices and sustainability considerations into investment decisions

Transparently disclosing ESG strategy and performance to investors through reporting frameworks such as GRESB (Global Real Estate Sustainability Benchmark), GRI (Global Reporting Initiative), INREV (European Association for Investors in Non-Listed Real Estate Vehicles), CDP (Carbon Disclosure Project) and UN PRI (United Nations Principles for Responsible Investment)

Ensuring that our employees adhere to the highest standards of honest and ethical conduct

Global Real Estate Strategy Investment Philosophy

IRE's philosophy for the fund is to provide a total return from global direct real estate through investment in core open-ended funds across the three principle regions, with an enhanced level of liquidity through an investment in real estate securities.

The fund maintains the following fundamental philosophies;

- Maximise the predictability and consistency of investment returns; and
- Minimise the risk of capital loss

The addition of the liquidity component allows investors to take advantage of the benefits of direct real estate with the added benefit of a liquidity mechanism to provide daily subscriptions and redemptions in a normal market environment.

Global Real Estate Strategy Investment Process

Invesco Global Real Estate Strategy's investment process focuses on portfolio construction and consists of three interactive phases:

1. Strategy and Tactics
2. Implementation and Execution
3. Performance Evaluation

Stage 1: Strategy and Tactics

The Invesco Global Real Estate Strategy investment plan is based on regional assessments of real estate markets and their sector conditions, i.e. 'Top down' analysis, and on property specific assessments, i.e. 'Bottom up' analysis.

This regional analysis informs the "Regional House Views" which in turn informs the "Global House View" and covers both direct and listed real estate. The Global House View is therefore IRE's collective belief of the way the firm should invest in institutional real estate markets. This approach ensures clarity in understanding the current opportunities and risks in the market, along with providing the teams with a specific plan to execute and achieve the objectives.

The major components of the Global House View include:

- Economic and financial outlook;
- Real estate market outlook;
- Outlook for each region; and
- Global investment strategy considerations.

Tactical Allocation

The development of tactical allocation is introduced to take advantage of market outlook and also to facilitate capital management. Tactical allocation decisions for the Invesco Global Real Estate Strategy can take three forms:

1. Allocation between the Direct versus Listed real estate
2. Allocation between the regional direct underlying strategies
3. Allocation between Equity and Debt within the Global Income Listed Fund.

Stage 2: Implementation and Execution

The Manager implements the recommendations and objectives according to the Investment Plan.

The Portfolio Management team determines the allocation and rebalances the portfolio with incoming and outgoing flows on each trade day, and instructs the relevant teams within Invesco to execute the subscriptions and trades accordingly.

Stage 3: Performance evaluation

The Manager regularly assesses the success of the strategy and its implementation.

Once an investment is made in the Underlying strategies, the responsibility for executing the tactical strategies that create value are administered by IRE's Portfolio Management Teams and its Asset Management teams in the case of the Direct Real Estate investments.

Direct Real Estate seeks to provide:

- An institutional quality real estate portfolio
- Durable and growing income over time
- A conservative risk profile
- Diversification via a low correlation to stocks and bonds
- Lower volatility than public market asset classes
- Higher correlation with inflation than stocks and bonds
- An allocation to Core Plus via 'Invesco US Income Fund' seeks to boost income and increase diversification

Direct Real Estate Funds

Just as the Global Real Estate Strategy follows a three phase investment process - so too do the four underlying direct real estate funds.

From a top-down standpoint, the decisions related to market selection and property sector allocation are critical, and may account for a significant amount of the excess return generated from a portfolio. Getting these two factors right is paramount. The focus then shifts to the key bottom-up factors; property specific selection and execution of the business plan by expert specialists.
